

Rationale

I have chosen to do my navigation the way I did because I wanted to keep things simple. Any more than four choices to start from at the top would have been a little too much clutter.

I did the site map similarly in that I did not break it up into unnecessary pages. Half of them just ended right there after the main navigation. Things like portfolio lead on a bit further, but only so that the right employer sees the right thing first. For example, I don't want a Journalism employer to have to read through my creative writing before finding my news stories.